Addressed questions on critical minerals and clean energy transition in Lok Sabha

- Currently, India depends on imports for nearly 90–95% of its critical mineral requirements. To reduce this heavy dependence and strengthen our strategic capabilities, the Cabinet approved the National Critical Mineral Mission (NCMM).
- Under this mission, we are actively pursuing government-to-government agreements to secure critical mineral assets abroad. An agreement with Argentina for lithium mining has already been finalised & discussions with countries such as Brazil are in advanced stages.
- Urban mining presents a major opportunity—through systematic recycling of e-waste, we can recover & reuse significant quantities of critical minerals.
